The New York Post says letters received in that city from Matamoras, dated at the close of January, give information that flour is selling on the Nueces river at $130 per barrel and corn at $12 per bushel. There is no doubt that large supplies reach the Confederacy from Mexico through Texas, but the press wants that the army do not permit them to be used by citizens. The rebel steamers recently captured by Col. Ellet in the Queen of the West, were loaded in part with cotton clothes, which doubtless came into the country across the Rio Grande. The vast trade in cotton which has sprung up between Texas and Mexico gives unusual facilities for the transportation of goods into the rebellious States. The Post says the train of cotton wagons, instead of coming back empty from their voyage to the Rio Grande, bear supplies for the rebels. These strike the Bayou Brazos and Colorado Rail road at Alleyton, near Columbus. The goods are shipped to Houston, and from there on the Texas and New Orleans Railroad to Beaumont on the Sabine river. From there to the Red river they must again be wagoned, but the distance is comparatively short, and a glance at the map will show that the entire transportation is not nearly so difficult or tedious as has been thought. The re-occupation of Texas and a rigid enforcement of our revenue laws along the Rio Grande would soon put a stop to these supplies.

It has been inferred from our notice of the difficulty which occurred between Henry K. Roberts and Isaac Batman that Mr. Roberts was one of the persons who insulted Mr. Roberts on Sunday. This was not the fact. Mr. Batman had nothing to do with the difficulty on Sunday. Our statement of the particulars was not quite correct in our issue of the 18th. The facts were these: As Mr. Roberts was passing out of the room, Batman stooped to pick up a cigar, by which their persons accidentally came in contact. After exchanging a word or two, Batman made an attempt to take Robert by the throat, who stepped back, drew his pistol, and while Batman was in the act of drawing his fire, YOUTHERFUL MEN.—We hear frequent accounts of misdeeds and felonies being committed by youths in this city. We learn that there is an organization of boy town folk who call themselves Forty Thieves and who live in defiance of all law. A few days ago one of this gang, named Henry Johnson, wrested from son of Mr. Tidwell a pocket-book containing the sum of five dollars. Johnson, after taking possession of the money, threw the pocket-book into a church-yard near by. The attention of the police was called to the affair, and yesterday officer June succeeded in arresting the boy and recovering the money. In consideration of Johnson's extreme youth, the Chief of Police did not insist upon his prosecution.

SIZERS OF CONFISCATED SLAVES.—As the steamer Courier was coming up on Wednesday she landed at Carville about noon. On board the boat, among other passengers, was Mr. J. F. Frick, Architect and Engineer, from whom we learn that he is a native of Cairo, having in his charge two contrabands hired from the United States authorities at Cairo, with whom he was on his way to some point above to do some work. The Evansville Journal says that while the boat was lying at Carville, and while the officers were at dinner, some fifteen or twenty men came aboard to seize the negroes, under the plea that they were executing the laws of Kentucky. Capt. Lemcke, hearing of the affair, protested against the act, explaining the status of the negro, but was unable to procure their release.

The matter was finally arranged by some seven of the Kentuckians giving a bond rendering them amenable to the Courier and Mr. Frick for any damages that might accrue to them, and pledging themselves to lodge them in jail at Smithland within two days. The bond was signed by W. M. Lee, D. J. Ellington, R. A. Kidd, W. T. Bader, J. C. Barnett, J. E. Boyd, and James Bagman. These negroes, as the Journal is informed, legally confiscated, as the property of rebels under the laws of the United States; and the fact of forcibly taking them from the Courier, it says, was a high-handed outrage against the laws and authority of the United States.

THE Paris Citizen says that a number of individuals, who left the State with the Confederate armies, have returned to their homes in that country within the last few days, most of whom have delivered themselves to the proper authorities and taken the oath of allegiance. Others may be expected daily.

Mr. Willis W. Hedges, of Bourne county, purchased the other day the farm of Mr. S. Holley, near Payne's Depot, in Scott county, containing about 270 acres, at $100 per acre.

UNION CONVENTION.

At a meeting of the Union members of the Legislature, in the House of Representatives, on Monday evening, Feb. 16th, 1863, on motion, Hon. Joseph Underwood was called to the Chair, and John B. Bruner appointed Secretary.

After a free and full consultation, it is recommended to the Union Democracy of Kentucky, that they assemble in convention, through their delegates, in the city of Louisville, on the 18th day of March next, and nominate suitable persons as candidates to fill the various State offices, to be chosen at the next August election. It is further recommended that the people meet, at some convenient time and place, in their respective counties, and appoint delegates to represent them in the convention. J. R. UNDERWOOD, Oh'm'n.

JONES, Sec'y.

We understand that a memorial from some of the members of the exploded convention at Frankfort was presented to the House, on Friday, and referred to one of the standing committees of the body. We hope the memorial will be allowed to go to sleep on the table of the committee and never be awakened. It is simply a piece of audacious impertinence. Let it stay where it was sent.

To the mere expediency of the action of the military authorities in dispersing the secession convention, we know at present as little as we knew when we first noticed the action, and, accordingly, shall say as little, which is nothing; but, as to the lawfulness and justice of the action, we have never had a shadow of doubt. And it appears to us that a candid man, whatever may lie his propensities in this strife, can harbor a doubt on the point only by ignoring the actual condition of the State of Kentucky, unlike the loyal States of the North, is the theatre of war. She is not only the theatre of war, but a subject of the war. Kentucky is a prize for the possession of which the rebels on the one side and the Union seconded by Kentucky herself on the other side are openly contending in arms; and the contest is fighting out upon her own soil. It began eighteen months ago, has raged uninterruptedly ever since, and is yet pending. When or how it will end remains to be seen. In the meantime, Kentucky, thus assailed by the military force of the rebellion, and having within her borders a hostile population strong in numbers and in influence, holds her position as an actual member of the Union by the tenure of the sword. Nothing can be plainer than this. The condition in Kentucky is that of a pending trial of military force, with the present advantage in favor of Kentucky and of the Union. This is undeniably the actual situation. But for the military force of the Union, the military force of the rebellion would have dragged Kentucky into the rebel confederacy long ago, and would do so now at any hour. The question here is purely one of arms. It is a question of bullets not of balls. It is directly the reverse of the question in the loyal States of the North.

Hence, the military authorities of the Union, in dealing with the hostile population of Kentucky, are clothed with the lawful powers of war, and, with all due counsel and consideration, are bound to exercise such powers. Kentucky, so long as she is the theatre of war, has no right, legal or moral, to step between the military authorities of the Union and the active enemies of the Union upon her soil, no matter whether such enemies be her own sons or not. Nor has she any right to judge for the military authorities who are and who are not active enemies of the Union upon her soil. The existence of such a right on the part of the civil authorities would convert the laws of war into a farce; the exercise of such a right would convert her itself into a farce. The movement of last summer, contemplated as an organization, for the purpose of operating effectually with the invading force. The Union men of Kentucky are certainly not prepared to go through with any such operation as this in a matter so vital to the cause of the state and of the nation. The secessionists of Kentucky, as the auxiliaries of the rebels in arms, are comparatively powerless from the lack of organization; and they cannot organize efficiently within the State except under the mask of a political party. The present movement, like the movement of last summer, contemplated as an organization, for the purpose of operating effectually with the invading force. The Union men of Kentucky are certainly not prepared to go through with any such operation as this in a matter so vital to the cause of the state and of the nation.

Governor Johnson, of Tennessee, has issued a proclamation of some interest to the rebel owners of property in certain portions of Tennessee. He sets forth that many persons possessing real and personal estate in that portion of Tennessee within the jurisdiction of the Government of the United States, come within the provisions of sections fifth and sixth of an act of Congress approved July 17, 1862, and have failed to avail themselves of the provision of the fifth section within the sixty days, which expired under the proclamation of the President on the 23d day of September, 1862; and that many such persons are now within the so-called Confederate States, having left their property in charge of agents, who collect the rents and forward the same to the parties, or retain and invest it for their benefit, therefore he warns all persons holding, renting, occupying, or using any such real or personal estates, or the rents, issues, and profits thereof, as well as all agents, not to pay the same over to the owners or their agents, but to retain the same until some person suitable has been appointed in behalf of the United States to receive the same, and hold it subject to the order of the Government.
